Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Heat the olive oil in a wide pot over medium heat, add the lamb pieces with salt and pepper and brown them well on one side, then turn and brown the other side. 0:40
2. Add the bay leaf, garlic and onion and let the onion soften in the oil, then stir in the spring onions and most of the parsley and dill. 1:20
3. Pour in the white wine and let the alcohol cook off. Add cold water just to the level of the meat, cover with wet baking paper and the lid, and simmer gently for about 1 hour. 2:02
4. Meanwhile blanch the chopped lettuce in a pot of boiling salted water for 2 minutes to shrink it, then drain (no need to cool it). 2:45
5. Push the lamb to one side, add the lettuce, the rest of the herbs and spring onion greens, a little salt and a drizzle of oil, and simmer until the lamb is meltingly tender (up to 30 minutes). 3:48
6. For the avgolemono, whisk the 2 egg yolks hard with the lemon juice until frothy. 4:40
7. Take the pot off the heat. Whisk a ladle of hot broth into the egg mixture, pour it back into the pot and shake the pot by its handles to mix, then return to the heat for 1 minute. 5:00
8. Serve with a little chopped dill and a drizzle of olive oil. 6:03

> Tip Serves 4 as on the chef's ingredient card. Leg on the bone is traditional; shoulder also works. Spinach or wild greens can replace some of the lettuce. Bread for the sauce is usual but optional.

The method is a summary in our words, in English — the video (in Greek) shows every step.
