Black soybeans roasted and simmered in a garlicky gravy: a vegan dal with about 18 g protein, 8 g fibre and 13 g net carbs a serve, and nearly a third of a day's iron.

Diet notes: Low saturated fat (2.4 g, 7% of the energy); DASH-friendly (390 mg sodium a serve).

Allergens found in the listed ingredients: Gluten, Soy, Mustard. Worked out from the ingredient list, not tested. Stock, sauces, spice mixes and other packaged foods can contain allergens, so always read the labels on what you buy. If you have a food allergy, don't rely on this.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Wash the black soybeans and dry them well on a cloth. Crush the coriander seeds, garlic and green chillies to a coarse paste in a mortar. 0:40
2. Put the paste in a bowl with the turmeric, chilli powder and ground coriander and mix with a little water. 1:32
3. Heat 2 tbsp mustard oil in a heavy iron kadai until it smokes, let it cool a little, add the dry black soybeans and roast on the lowest heat, stirring all the time, until they crackle and split. 2:44
4. Add the wheat flour and keep roasting on low for 1–2 minutes until it changes colour, then tip everything out. 4:15
5. Heat the remaining 2 tbsp oil in the same pan, let it cool a little, crackle the cumin and hing, then fry the onions on high heat until light brown. 5:00
6. Add the spice paste and cook on low heat until it darkens and the oil glistens. 5:36
7. Return the roasted soybeans and flour, then pour in the hot water a little at a time, stirring constantly so no lumps form. Add salt and simmer 15 minutes until the beans are soft and the gravy thickens. Finish with coriander. 5:58

> Tip Serves 5, as the cook says. Traditionally eaten with rice or roti in Uttarakhand; it is lower in carbs on its own or with cauliflower rice. Black soybeans (kala bhatt) are sold in Indian grocers.

The method is a summary in our words, in English — the video (in Hindi) shows every step.
