Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Slice the radish into thin strips, toss with a little salt and rest 10 minutes. Julienne the zucchini (discard the seedy core) and carrot. Slice the beef thinly and marinate with the soy sauce, 1 Tbsp sesame oil, ½ Tbsp garlic, 1 Tbsp honey and pepper. 0:40
2. Blanch the soybean sprouts in boiling water 2–3 minutes, rinse in cold water and drain. Blanch the spinach in the same water for 1 minute, cool in cold water and squeeze dry. 2:05
3. Heat ½ Tbsp oil in a pan and stir-fry the zucchini over high heat for a minute with a pinch of salt. Repeat with the carrot, then cook the marinated beef in the same pan until browned through. Fry the eggs to your liking. 2:32
4. Season the sprouts and the spinach separately, each with two pinches of salt, 1 Tbsp sesame oil, ½ Tbsp sesame seeds and a little minced garlic. 3:24
5. Squeeze the water from the salted radish and toss with the gochugaru, fish sauce, ½ Tbsp sesame seeds, 1 tsp garlic and ½ Tbsp honey to make musaengchae. 4:03
6. Put a bowl of rice in each serving bowl and arrange the spinach, sprouts, carrot, zucchini, radish salad and beef in sections on top. Set a fried egg in the centre, add a little sesame oil and a spoon of gochujang, then mix well to eat. 4:47

> Tip Serves 2 (our estimate: the cook makes two bowls). Use less gochujang and fish sauce to cut the salt. Dolsot style: 1 Tbsp sesame oil in a hot stone bowl, add rice and toppings, low heat 5–10 min. Namul keep 3 days.
