Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Soak the chana dal in water for at least 2 hours (overnight is best), then drain. 0:30
2. Heat the oil in a pot and lightly fry the dried chillies, cinnamon, cardamom, cloves, peppercorns, panch phoron and bay leaf. 0:55
3. Add the sliced onion and fry 3–4 minutes until soft. Add the ajwain, hing and the ginger and garlic pastes and fry until the raw smell goes. 1:28
4. Add the chilli powder, cumin, coriander and turmeric with 120 ml water and the salt. Cover and cook on medium for 4–5 minutes until the oil separates. 2:15
5. Add the drained dal and stir-fry it in the masala for 5–6 minutes. 3:01
6. Pour in 1.4 L of hot water (710 ml for each cup of dal), cover and simmer on medium-low for about 40 minutes, until the dal is soft but still holds its shape. 3:39
7. Add the green chillies and coriander leaves, cover and leave on the lowest heat for 5 minutes. It thickens as it cools. 4:27

> Tip Serves 8 as a side (our estimate: about 1.9 kg of dal, a 230 g bowl each). In Bangladesh it is a hotel breakfast with paratha or ruti; with eggs or a salad instead of bread it has fewer carbs.

The method is a summary in our words, in English — the video (in Bengali) shows every step.
