Thin egg pancakes replace pasta, giving about 29 g protein and a quarter of a day's calcium per slice with almost no carbs. With cheese and cream it is very high in saturated fat, so keep it as an occasional treat.

Diet notes: Keto (1.6 g net carbs a serve).

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Whisk the eggs with about 25 ml of the cream. Melt about 1 tbsp butter in a non-stick pan over medium heat, pour in a thin layer and cook 1–2 minutes per side. Repeat to make thin egg pancakes (noodles). 0:49
2. In the same pan, with a pat of butter, brown the beef with a little salt. 1:46
3. Melt the 20 g butter in a small pot over low heat, add the rest of the cream and warm it without boiling, then stir in most of the cheese to make a sauce. 1:54
4. In a small baking tray, layer egg pancake, beef and cheese sauce, and repeat until everything is used. 2:42
5. Bake at 180°C in an air fryer for 7 minutes, or about 10–12 minutes at 200°C in an oven. Add the remaining cheese 2 minutes before the end and let it melt. 3:27

> Tip Makes 4 slices. For thicker meat layers simply cook more mince. No air fryer? Use the oven times given. Keeps 3 days in the fridge; reheat slices in the oven or air fryer.
