Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Cook the shallot in the oil with a pinch of salt over medium heat for about 5 minutes until soft and sweet. Grate in the garlic near the end so it doesn't burn. 0:26
2. Add the peppercorns, then the brandy, and let it bubble for a moment or two until it looks a little syrupy. 1:12
3. Pour in the beef stock, turn up the heat and boil until it has reduced and thickened noticeably. 1:40
4. Stir in the cream and Dijon mustard and simmer gently (not boiling) for about 20 minutes, until a spatula drawn through the sauce shows the base of the pan for a moment. 2:26
5. Taste before adding more salt — the reduction concentrates the flavour. Serve with steak, or cool and keep in the fridge for up to 3 days and reheat gently. 3:10

> Tip Use fresh or homemade stock, or a low-salt one: stock cubes turn very salty when reduced. Waitrose doesn't give a yield; we estimate about 1 cup, 8 portions of 2 tbsp.
