1. Heat the oven to 350°F. Mix the almond flour and salt, then rub and flatten the cold butter cubes into it with your fingers until crumbly. Add the egg and bring it together into a dough. 0:38
2. Press the dough evenly into a greased 9 inch loose-bottomed tart pan and freeze for 15 minutes. 2:13
3. Prick the base, line with baking paper and baking weights and bake 15 minutes; remove the paper and weights and bake another 15 minutes. Turn the oven down to 300°F. 2:43
4. Put the chopped chocolate, powdered erythritol and salt (if using) in a bowl. Bring the cream to the boil, pour it over, leave 1 minute, then stir until smooth. 3:25
5. Whisk in the softened butter, then the egg, then the almond milk until silky. 4:44
6. Pour into the crust and bake at 300°F for about 20 minutes, until set. Cool completely before removing from the pan; chill for a firmer texture. 5:54

> Tip Decorate with a few raspberries or strawberries, a dusting of powdered sweetener or flaky salt, or serve with crème fraîche (all optional). Keeps a week in the fridge or months in the freezer.
