- [ ] 950 ml fresh green beans, ends snapped off

- [ ] 1 bay leaf (stays in the jar)
- [ ] 2 heads fresh dill (or 1 tbsp dill seed; stays in the jar)

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Stir 1 tbsp kosher salt into 470 ml water until it dissolves (make double or triple for more jars). 2:07
2. Put 1 clove garlic, 1 tsp black peppercorns, 1 bay leaf and 2 heads fresh dill in the bottom of a clean quart jar. 2:29
3. Pack in about 450 g trimmed green beans as tightly as they'll fit — standing upright if you like. 3:00
4. Pour in the brine to cover the beans, leaving about 2.5 cm of headspace, and weigh them down (a glass weight works well) so none stick up above the brine. 3:24
5. Fit the lid loosely, or use an airlock lid. Leave on a warm spot on the counter for 5–7 days, opening the jar every day to let the gas out. 3:57
6. Taste: ferment a few days more for a stronger flavour, then refrigerate. They keep for 2–3 months in the fridge. 4:17

> Tip Makes 950 ml jar, about 15 five-bean serves (our estimate). Keep this jar away from other ferments and sourdough starter while it ferments. Dill is optional; dill seed works too.
