A frozen treat built on fruit: a quarter of a banana topped with peanut butter and peanuts and a thin chocolate drizzle, so the only added sugar is about 3 g from the chocolate chips. About 4 g of protein a bar.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Line a small rimmed baking sheet with baking paper. Peel the bananas, cut each in half across, then cut each half in half lengthways to make 8 pieces. 0:27
2. Spread the peanut butter over the cut sides, lay them on the sheet and sprinkle with half the chopped peanuts. Freeze for 45 minutes to set. 1:16
3. Melt the chocolate chips in the microwave in 10–20-second bursts, stirring, then stir in the coconut oil to make a runny drizzle. 2:48
4. Drizzle half the chocolate over the bananas, scatter over the rest of the peanuts, drizzle with the remaining chocolate and finish with a pinch of sea salt. 3:31
5. Freeze for about 2 hours, until firm. Keep in an airtight container in the freezer and eat straight from frozen. 4:29

> Tip Any nut butter works, or sunflower seed butter for nut-free; swap the peanuts for coconut or raisins. Dairy-free chips keep it vegan. Keeps a month in the freezer.
