Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Optional but worth it: pat the steaks dry, salt both sides (about 1½–2 tsp kosher salt per large steak) and leave uncovered on a rack in the fridge for 4–24 hours. 0:50
2. Prep the sauce ingredients first: mince the garlic, thyme and parsley, dice the shallot, crack the peppercorns and slice the butter. Cut the steak off the bone into 1 inch cubes (salt them now if you skipped the dry brine). 2:25
3. Heat the tallow in a large cast-iron or carbon-steel pan over high heat until smoking. Sear the cubes in two batches with space between them, 90–120 seconds a side, then toss briefly to brown the edges. Rest on a rack (about 118 °F for medium-rare). 3:55
4. Turn the heat to low and take the pan off the flame to add the cognac (or stock); let it bubble down to a few tablespoons, scraping up the browned bits. 5:31
5. Cook the shallot with a pinch of salt until lightly golden, then add the garlic and cracked pepper until fragrant. Stir in the thyme and butter until melted and foamy, then a squeeze of lemon and salt to taste. 5:58
6. Return the steak to the pan, toss to coat in the garlic butter and finish with the parsley. 6:51

> Tip In the video it comes with mustard potatoes and broccoli — keep the broccoli (or a green salad) for keto. Top sirloin is the cook's budget pick. Use beef stock instead of cognac if you prefer.
