Zucchini noodles stand in for chow mein noodles, so a serve has about 10 g net carbs and over 25 g protein from the chicken breast, plus vitamin C from the zucchini.

Diet notes: Low carb (9.8 g net carbs) but not keto: 45% of the energy is from fat, and keto meals get about 60% or more; Low saturated fat (2.3 g, 7% of the energy); Paleo with a swap: arrowroot or tapioca starch instead of the cornstarch, coconut aminos instead of the oyster sauce, coconut aminos instead of the soy sauce; Gluten-free with a swap: Use tamari and a gluten-free oyster sauce, to keep it gluten-free.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Spiralise the zucchini, put the noodles in a strainer over a bowl, toss with a generous pinch of salt and leave about 5 minutes to draw out water. 0:36
2. Slice the chicken thinly and toss with 1 tbsp oyster sauce, the rice wine and a pinch of pepper. Set aside. 1:13
3. Chop the garlic, ginger and green onions and slice the chilli. Whisk the remaining oyster sauce with the soy sauce, chicken stock and cornstarch. 1:29
4. Tip away the liquid from the zucchini and pat the noodles dry with paper towels — don't rinse them. 1:50
5. Heat a large skillet over high heat with 1 tbsp oil and stir-fry the chicken until just cooked through, then remove it so it stays juicy. 2:18
6. Add the other 2 tbsp oil and stir-fry the garlic, ginger, green onion and chilli for about a minute until fragrant. Stir the sauce again and pour it in. 2:45
7. When the sauce bubbles, add the zoodles and toss to coat, then add the chicken, turn off the heat and sprinkle with sesame seeds. 3:36

> Tip A lean low-carb stir-fry rather than a keto one. Salting and patting the zoodles dry keeps the sauce from going watery. Thigh fillets or prawns work too.

The method is a summary in our words — the video shows every step.
