Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Twist a tea towel into a ring and sit a round-bottomed bowl in it so the bowl stays steady and tilted, leaving both hands free. 0:26
2. Whisk the egg yolks with the mustard until smooth. 0:39
3. Whisking all the time, add the oil a few drops at a time; adding it too fast at the start splits the sauce. Once it thickens and turns glossy, you can pour in a thin, steady stream. 1:20
4. When about half the oil is in and the mayo is very thick, whisk in 1 tbsp of vinegar to loosen it and lighten the colour, then whisk in the rest of the oil. 2:10
5. Season with salt, a squeeze of lemon and a little more vinegar to taste. Spoon into a clean jar and keep in the fridge for up to a week. 2:15

> Tip The yolks stay raw, so use pasteurised eggs for pregnant women, young children, older people or anyone unwell. Stir in crushed garlic for aioli, or chopped herbs and capers for a quick tartare-style sauce.
