Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Skin the swordfish and cut it into very thin slices, 0–0 inch thick (a meat slicer or your fishmonger can do this). 0:45
2. Pound the slices lightly with a meat mallet so they are evenly thin, taking care as swordfish is delicate. 1:25
3. For the filling, blitz the stale bread in a food processor with the olives and the rinsed capers, then add the breadcrumbs, cheese and parsley and blitz again (or chop everything finely by hand). 1:51
4. Tip into a bowl, taste before adding salt (capers and olives are salty), then add pepper and a drizzle of olive oil and mix: it should be slightly moist but still crumbly. 2:43
5. Lay the slices out, cover them generously with filling, fold in the sides and roll them up without pressing too hard. 3:22
6. Salt lightly and set the rolls in an oiled baking dish. Drizzle with a little oil, sprinkle with a little leftover filling and bake at 400°F for about 10 minutes, using the grill setting for a golden top. 3:59
7. Serve hot with a drizzle of olive oil, some chopped parsley and a fresh green salad. 5:53

> Tip Rolls can be made a day ahead, covered and chilled, then baked just before serving. They also cook on a hot oiled griddle: about 1 minute a side, seam-side down first, then covered with foil to finish.

The method is a summary in our words, in English — the video (in Italian) shows every step.
