Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Wrap the shrimp paste in a piece of banana leaf or foil and toast it over low heat until it smells roasted. 1:10
2. Dry-toast the dried shrimp in a pan over low heat, stirring, until crisp and fragrant; leave any burnt crumbs behind. 1:53
3. In a mortar, pound the dried shrimp fine, then the peppercorns. Add the shallots and broken-up krachai and pound, then return the shrimp, add the shrimp paste and pound to a paste. 2:55
4. Bring the water to the boil, stir in the paste and rinse the mortar with a little of the hot water so none is wasted. 5:30
5. Add the pumpkin first and boil for 2–3 minutes until it starts to soften; leave the foam, it is mostly the paste. 6:14
6. Add the luffa, all the mushrooms and the cowslip creeper flowers. Return to the boil and skim off any remaining foam. 7:42
7. When it boils again, push in the ivy gourd leaves and lemon basil, then add the prawns and press them under without stirring. 9:24
8. Once it boils again, stir gently and season with fish sauce a little at a time, tasting as you go. Turn off the heat as soon as the prawns are just cooked. 10:12

> Tip Serves about 8 bowls (our estimate: the pot holds about 9 lb). Use any vegetables you like; the cook suggests baby corn or sweet corn. It is usually eaten with rice; it is filling enough to eat as a bowl on its own.
