Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Heat the oven to 428°F for a good 20–30 minutes so it is really hot. Line a 6 inch round pan, 3 inches deep, roughly with parchment that stands above the rim. 0:28
2. Lightly beat the eggs with the salt and vanilla. In a larger bowl, stir the cream cheese with a spatula until smooth, then mix in the allulose until creamy. 0:58
3. Whisk in the egg mixture in two additions, then the cream, until smooth. Strain the batter into the pan to remove any lumps. 2:04
4. Bake on the middle shelf 20–30 minutes, turning the pan halfway, until the top is very dark and the centre still wobbles. If the top is still pale at 30 minutes, don't keep baking just to darken it. It rises, then sinks as it cools. 4:09
5. Cool to room temperature, then chill a few hours or overnight. Serve cold for a firm slice, or leave out 15–30 minutes for a softer, custardy centre. 4:22

> Tip About 20 minutes gives an oozy centre, 30 minutes a creamy one, a little longer a firmer slice. For a bigger pan, scale the recipe up. Any keto sweetener can replace the allulose.
