Coconut flour, eggs and butter replace wheat: about 4 g net carbs and nearly 5 g fibre a roll, with no nuts and no sugar.

Diet notes: Keto (4.3 g net carbs a serve); Paleo with a swap: ghee instead of the butter, leave out the granulated monk fruit sweetener.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Heat the oven to 200 °C and line a 20 cm round cake pan with baking paper. 1:27
2. In a large bowl, whisk the coconut flour, sweetener (if using), baking powder, salt and xanthan gum until there are no lumps. 1:34
3. Stir in the eggs until the flour is moistened, then the cooled melted butter, then the warm milk. Keep stirring 20–30 seconds more so the coconut flour soaks up the liquid. 2:46
4. Gather the dough into a ball and knead it gently for a minute (a little more coconut flour if sticky), rest it 5 minutes, then check it rolls smoothly — add a few drops of water if crumbly. 3:57
5. Divide into 9 portions (about 60 ml each), roll each into a tight smooth ball and set them in the pan touching each other so they keep their shape. 5:32
6. Whisk the extra egg with 1 tbsp water and brush a light coat over the tops. 6:48
7. Bake 23–25 minutes until lightly browned and a tester comes out clean, then cool in the pan 15–20 minutes before lifting them out. 7:17

> Tip Add herbs, garlic or spices to the dough for flavoured rolls, or leave out the sweetener. Keeps 3 days in an airtight container, or a week in the fridge.
