Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Put the strawberries in a blender or food processor. If they're frozen, thaw and drain them first so the ice cream isn't icy. 0:27
2. Add the allulose (or BochaSweet), which keeps the ice cream softer than erythritol alone, and blend smooth or leave a few chunks. 1:01
3. In a bowl, whisk the sour cream, vanilla and strawberry purée until well combined. Set aside. 1:26
4. Beat the heavy cream with the powdered erythritol until it holds stiff peaks. 1:57
5. Fold the strawberry mixture into the whipped cream until no streaks remain, then spread it in a freezer-safe dish. 2:27
6. Freeze at least 6 hours, ideally overnight, then scoop into 120 ml servings. It stays scoopable straight from the freezer. 2:44

> Tip The cook also adds an optional 2 tbsp (28 g) vodka to the purée to reduce iciness; we've left it out. Keeps in an airtight container for up to 3 months.
