Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Rinse the grape leaves, soak them a few minutes in a bowl of boiling water, drain and stack them. Cut out any thick stems. 0:52
2. Mix the uncooked rice with the chopped tomato, parsley, green onions, green pepper, garlic, crushed red pepper, mint, salt and pepper. Stir in ¼ cup of the olive oil. 0:59
3. Lay a leaf flat, vein side up, put about 2 teaspoons of filling in a line near the stem end, fold in the sides and roll up firmly but not too tight (the rice swells). Repeat to make about 60 rolls. 1:51
4. Line a large pot with the tomato slices and season. Pack the rolls in tightly in layers, alternating direction, drizzling each layer with some of the remaining ½ cup oil and a little salt and pepper. 2:37
5. Weigh the rolls down with an upside-down plate, add 5–6 cups of water to cover, put the lid on and cook on medium heat 30 minutes, until most of the water is absorbed. 3:11
6. Pour over the lemon juice and cook on low heat 45 minutes more. Rest 30 minutes, then serve warm or at room temperature. 3:40

> Tip The cook counts 8 serves; we count 12 snack serves of 5 rolls. Rinse the leaves well: their brine is very salty. Keeps up to 5 days in the fridge and is good cold. Rolling takes time, so get friends or family to help.
