Made from whole toasted peanuts rather than peanut butter, with very little salt: 2 tbsp give about 110 kcal, 4 g of protein and about 3 g of added sugar.

Diet notes: Low saturated fat (1 g, 8% of the energy); DASH-friendly (30 mg sodium a serve).

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Toast the peanuts in a dry pan, stirring, until fragrant and lightly browned. Soak them in water, rub off as much of the skins as you can, then pulse to a coarse, grainy texture — not a paste. 1:41
2. Chop the lemongrass and blend it with the galangal, garlic and dried chillies to a paste. 2:49
3. Heat the oil over medium heat and fry the sliced shallots for about a minute until they start to colour. Add the chilli paste and fry, stirring, until fragrant and the oil starts to separate. 4:01
4. Stir in the crushed peanuts, water and salt, turn up the heat and bring to the boil, then add about half the palm sugar. 4:38
5. Simmer over low–medium heat for about 20 minutes, stirring often so it doesn't catch, until thick. Taste, add the rest of the sugar to your liking, then stir in the tamarind paste. 5:15

> Tip Makes about 650 ml (our estimate: 22 portions of 2 tbsp). Use less sugar if you prefer it less sweet. Keeps a week in the fridge or months in the freezer; reheat before serving with satay, rice or noodles.
