Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Line an 8- or 9 inch square pan with wax or baking paper. 0:34
2. Put the butter and peanut butter in a large bowl and melt them together in the microwave (or in a pan on the stove), then whisk until smooth. 0:50
3. Whisk in the powdered sweetener until smooth, then add the vanilla and a little salt. 1:43
4. Stir in the peanut flour with a spatula, working it in until the mixture thickens into one ball of dough. If it stays soft, add a little more peanut flour. 2:08
5. Press the dough evenly into the pan with your hands, then smooth it under a sheet of paper with a flat-bottomed glass. Chill while you make the topping. 3:13
6. Melt the 2 tbsp butter with the chopped chocolate, stirring until smooth and glossy. 3:51
7. Pour the chocolate over the chilled base, spread it to the edges and shake the pan to level it. Refrigerate for about 1 hour, until set. 4:18
8. Lift the slab out by the paper and cut into 16 bars with a sharp knife. Keep them in the fridge. 5:00

> Tip Peanut butter powder works in place of peanut flour, as the cook notes. The bars keep about 3 weeks covered in the fridge and freeze well wrapped.
