Oyakodon Chicken and Egg Rice Bowl

25 min · Serves 2 · 801 kcal a serve · Video 4:42 · Just One Cookbook

No dairy listed · No nuts listed

Chicken thigh and four eggs give about 49 g of protein a serve, and it is rich in selenium, zinc and vitamin B12; nothing is fried. The mirin and sugar add about 12 g of sugar a serve, so it is a hearty rather than light bowl.

Diet notes: Low saturated fat (6.7 g, 8% of the energy); Gluten-free with a swap: Use tamari in place of soy sauce and check that the dashi contains no wheat.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Trim the chicken thighs, cut into 1-inch strips along the grain, then slice on an angle into 1-inch pieces of even thickness. Toss with the sake and rest 5 minutes. Slice the onion and green onion. 0:32
2. In a medium frying pan with the heat off, stir together the dashi, soy sauce, mirin and sugar until the sugar dissolves. 1:18
3. Lay the onion in a single layer in the sauce and spread the chicken evenly on top. Bring to a simmer over medium heat, then lower to medium-low and cook uncovered about 5 minutes, flipping the chicken halfway, until cooked through and the onion is soft. 1:45
4. Crack the eggs into a bowl and cut through the whites a few times with chopsticks without fully mixing, so you get a marbled finish. 2:31
5. Raise the heat to medium and drizzle the eggs in a circle over the chicken, whites first. Avoid the pan edges, which overcook. Cover briefly if you want the whites to set faster. 2:53
6. Scatter over the green onion and cook on low until the eggs are as set as you like; traditionally they stay slightly soft. 3:30
7. Spoon rice into two bowls, slide the chicken and egg on top and drizzle over a little of the pan sauce. Add shichimi or sansho pepper if you like heat. 3:44

> Tip Swap in brown rice for extra fibre and add a side of blanched greens or miso soup. Works with firm tofu instead of chicken for a vegetarian version; use kombu dashi.
