Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Bring 3 litres of water to the boil, add the chicken with the onion chunk, bay leaf, garlic clove, bouillon powder, salt and ½ tsp oregano, and cook over high heat until very tender (about 55 minutes). 2:12
2. Meanwhile roughly cut the tomatillos, half onion, 2 garlic cloves and the green leaves. Stem the jalapeños and serrano (prick the serrano) and seed the poblanos. 2:40
3. In a dry pan, toast the pumpkin seeds, stirring all the time, until golden and popping (about 3 minutes), then the peanuts (2 minutes), then the sesame (1 minute, until it jumps). 3:41
4. Heat 1 heaped tbsp lard and fry the onion and garlic for a minute, then the jalapeños, serrano and tomatillos for 5 minutes over high heat. Add the oregano, cumin, pepper, allspice and cloves and 240 ml water, boil 5 minutes and cool. 4:41
5. Melt the other spoon of lard in a large pot; turn off the heat. Blend in three batches, pouring each in: the fried mix with some poblano, the salt, bouillon, sugar and 240 ml broth; the greens and other poblano with 470 ml broth; the seeds with 470 ml. 6:21
6. Rinse the blender with another cup of broth, add it and cook over medium heat for 15 minutes, stirring so it doesn't catch. Thin with a little more broth to taste and check the salt once it boils. 8:29
7. Add the chicken and simmer for 15 minutes more, stirring now and then, until the sauce turns deep green and a little green fat rises to the top. 9:16

> Tip Makes 6–8 serves (the cook's yield). Traditionally eaten with rice, beans and corn tortillas; with steamed greens it stays low in carbs. Freezes well; thin leftovers with a little broth.
