Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Scale and gut the fish, wash it well, and score both sides with about three deep cuts so it steams evenly. 0:30
2. Line a heatproof plate with sliced cabbage so the fish doesn't stick, lay the fish on top and steam over rapidly boiling water for about 12 minutes for a 2¼ lb fish (8–10 minutes if smaller). 1:42
3. Meanwhile squeeze the limes, keeping a few slices for the top, and slice the culantro, Chinese celery and coriander leaves, keeping the coriander roots for the sauce. 3:20
4. Put the coriander roots, garlic and both chillies in a small chopper, add the lime juice, fish sauce, palm sugar and water, and blend to a coarse, sharp sauce. 4:35
5. Check the fish is cooked: a fork should slide easily into the thickest part. Lay more cabbage and the herbs in a hot pot or serving plate and lift the fish onto it. 6:44
6. Pour the lime sauce all over the fish, top with the herbs, lime slices and garlic, and serve hot, ideally over a burner. 8:25

> Tip Serves 3 (our estimate: about 4 oz cooked fish each). The sauce is very salty; we count half of it as eaten (1.4 g sodium a serve) and eating it all doubles that, so spoon it over the fish. Snapper or barramundi work too. Eaten with rice.

The method is a summary in our words, in English — the video (in Thai) shows every step.
