A colourful kraut of red cabbage, beetroot, fennel and pear with no added sugar: about 14 kcal and 1 g fibre a ¼-cup serve. The fruit and beetroot stretch the salt, so it has about 205 mg sodium a serve — less than most krauts.

Diet notes: Low carb (2.5 g net carbs) but not keto: 5% of the energy is from fat, and keto meals get about 60% or more; Low saturated fat (0 g, 0% of the energy); DASH-friendly (210 mg sodium a serve).

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Save two outer cabbage leaves. Quarter, core and chop the cabbage by hand, and chop the white part of the fennel bulb. Toss both in a large bowl with 1 tbsp salt and leave 20–30 minutes. 1:32
2. Meanwhile put the fennel fronds, shredded beetroot, chopped pear and ground fennel seeds in a separate bowl (they would turn to mush if pounded). 4:31
3. Massage and pound the salted cabbage with clean hands or a tamper until it is limp and its juice pools in the bowl, then toss in the beetroot mixture. 5:59
4. Pack the kraut into clean jars a handful at a time, pressing out all air, until three-quarters full. Add half a garlic clove to each jar if you like, pour in the bowl juices and press down again. 8:05
5. Wedge a torn cabbage leaf over the top and set a weight on it so everything is under the brine. Cover with an airlock lid, or a coffee filter held with a jar ring. 10:41
6. Ferment on the counter for at least 3 days (the brine should test below pH 4.5 by day 3), tasting until you like it. Then close with a regular lid and refrigerate; it keeps for months. 12:57

> Tip Makes about 1.4 kg, roughly 36 quarter-cup serves (our estimate). For long storage keep it below 10°C, i.e. in the fridge. Beetroot stains, so wear gloves if you like.
