Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Rinse the beef and bones. Put the bones in a large pot of cold water so they flavour the broth; add the meat chunks once it boils so they stay juicy. 2:17
2. As soon as it boils, turn the heat to low, add the bay leaves and simmer uncovered about 1 hour, skimming off the foam regularly. 3:00
3. Meanwhile shred the cabbage, dice the onion, and cut the carrot, capsicum and tomatoes. 3:48
4. After about an hour, add the cabbage to the simmering broth and keep skimming as it cooks. 5:08
5. Heat the oil in a frying pan and soften the onion until translucent, then add the carrot, then the capsicum, and finally the tomatoes. Stir in the sugar to soften the tomato's sharpness and set aside. 5:58
6. Peel the potatoes, cut them into batons and add to the pot; cook until almost tender. 7:17
7. Season with salt and pepper, stir in the fried vegetables, turn off the heat and let the shchi stand at least 20 minutes. Serve with herbs and a spoon of smetana — it's even better the next day. 7:42

> Tip Makes about 12 large bowls of about 16 oz (the cook doesn't say). Chop the meat off the bone before serving. For fewer carbs use half the potato. Keeps 3–4 days in the fridge; freezes well.
