Tuna and eggs make this a filling, high-protein starter or light lunch (about 24 g of protein a tomato) with about 5 g of net carbs. Rich in vitamin D, B12 and selenium from the tuna.

Diet notes: Keto (4.6 g net carbs a serve); Paleo with a swap: avocado-oil mayonnaise instead of the mayonnaise.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Put the eggs in a saucepan with cold water to cover by about ½ inch, bring to the boil, then cover, turn off the heat and leave for 12 minutes. Cool under cold water and peel. 0:45
2. Slice the tops off the tomatoes, loosen the pulp with a paring knife and scoop it out gently (save it for a sauce). Salt the insides and set them cut side down on paper towels to drain. 1:16
3. Drain the tuna in a sieve, pressing lightly to remove excess oil, and put it in a bowl. 2:20
4. Add the mayonnaise, diced onion, grated garlic, 10 chopped olives and the roughly chopped eggs. Season with salt and pepper and mix gently. 2:58
5. Pack the tuna salad firmly into the tomatoes, top each with a whole olive and sprinkle with chives. Serve now or chill; they keep up to 3 days in the fridge. 4:30

> Tip Each tomato is substantial (about 430 kcal), so share one or use smaller tomatoes for a lighter snack. Keep the drained tuna oil for a dressing. Any good canned tuna works.
