Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Slice the onion, garlic and green chillies. Set aside half of the onion, garlic, curry leaves and turmeric for the tempering. 1:46
2. Wash the lentils well and put them in a pan with 120 ml water, the green chillies and the other half of the onion, garlic, curry leaves and turmeric. Cook on medium for 10–12 minutes until soft. 2:22
3. Pour in the coconut milk, season with salt and cook on low for at least 3 minutes. Set aside. 3:29
4. For the tempering, heat the oil in a frying pan and sauté the reserved onion, garlic, curry leaves and turmeric on low-medium for about a minute, until the onion turns golden. 4:11
5. Add the chilli powder, chilli flakes and whole dried chillies for 10–12 seconds, then the mustard seeds for another 15 seconds. 4:33
6. Put the dhal back on the heat and stir in the tempering gradually, swirling a spoonful of dhal around the frying pan to collect every bit. Taste for salt and serve warm. 5:06

> Tip Serve with rice. Add up to 120 ml more water if the lentils stick, or up to 240 ml of coconut milk. Keeps 2 days in the fridge; to freeze (2 weeks), freeze before adding the coconut milk and add it with the tempering when reheating.
