Chicken thigh with aubergine, snow peas and bamboo shoots gives about 25 g of protein a serve, with half a day's selenium and a third of a day's vitamin B6 and iron. A full can of coconut milk makes it rich and high in saturated fat.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Cut the chicken into bite-size pieces and dice the eggplant. Slice the chilli, chop the shallot and garlic, bruise the lemongrass and drain the bamboo shoots. 0:10
2. Heat the oil over medium heat, add the lemongrass and garlic for a few seconds, then the shallot and fry until lightly browned. Add the curry paste and stir-fry until fragrant. 0:50
3. Pour in half the coconut milk (about 200 ml) and, once it bubbles, add the chicken and cook for 1–2 minutes. 1:20
4. Add the stock, water and remaining coconut milk, then the eggplant, and simmer until the eggplant is soft. 1:46
5. Season with the sugar and fish sauce, then add the bamboo shoots, lime leaves and snow peas and cook for a minute or two. 2:10
6. Turn off the heat, stir in the basil and sliced chilli, and serve with rice or rice noodles, coriander and a squeeze of lime. 2:38

> Tip Light coconut milk cuts the saturated fat by more than two-thirds (the cook uses regular). Breast is leaner than thigh. The paste and fish sauce are salty, so taste before adding more.

The method is a summary in our words — the video shows every step.
