No dairy listed · No nuts listed

A light, broth-based dish of about 325 kcal a serve, including a slice of toasted sourdough. Mussels give more than a day's vitamin B12 and are rich in selenium and iron, while the tomatoes and fresh herbs add vitamin C.

Diet notes: Low saturated fat (1.2 g, 3% of the energy); Paleo with a swap: olive, avocado or coconut oil instead of the vegetable oil, leave out the toasted sourdough; Gluten-free with a swap: Skip the bread (or use gluten-free bread) and check the stock and fish sauce labels; most are gluten-free.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Rinse the mussels twice in cold water. Tap any open ones and throw away those that don't close; scrub off barnacles and pull out the beards. 2:48
2. In a large pot, cook the garlic and red onion in the oil until the garlic turns golden. 1:01
3. Add the stock, lemongrass, galangal, lime leaves, crushed chillies, 1 cup of the tomatoes and the fish sauce, and bring to a boil. 1:32
4. Tip in the mussels, cover and cook about 2 minutes until they open, stirring halfway if it's a big batch. Discard any that stay shut after another minute. 3:16
5. Turn off the heat, stir in the Thai basil, coriander and remaining tomatoes, and cover for 20–30 seconds. Taste the broth, add lime juice if you like it tangy, and serve with the broth and toasted sourdough for dipping. 4:02

> Tip Serves 1–2 (the cook's estimate). The lemongrass, galangal and lime leaves flavour the broth and aren't eaten. Use fish stock instead of pork or chicken stock to make it pescatarian.
