Very ripe bananas do the sweetening instead of sugar, with peanut butter and cocoa: each brownie has about 15 g net carbs and 3 g fibre, and only 4 g added sugar from the chocolate chips.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Heat the oven to 350°F. Mash three large, very ripe bananas on a plate until smooth, to make about 1½ cups. 2:07
2. Put the banana in a bowl, add the peanut butter (warm it for 30 seconds if it is too firm) and the cocoa, and stir into a thick, smooth batter. 2:22
3. If you like, fold in ⅓ cup chocolate chips (the cook recommends them for sweetness and gooey pockets). 2:50
4. Line a 8 inch square tin with baking paper, snipping the corners so the paper folds in neatly. 2:57
5. Pour in the batter, spread it evenly and scatter a few more chocolate chips on top, if using. 3:08
6. Bake for 18–20 minutes, until a toothpick comes out without raw batter; give it a couple more minutes if needed. 3:15
7. Cool for about 30 minutes so the brownies firm up, then cut into 9 squares. 3:33

> Tip Almond butter works instead of peanut butter, or a seed butter for a nut-free version. Keeps 5 days in an airtight container in the fridge, or 3 months in the freezer.
