Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Cut the liver, kidney and veal into small, even pieces; keep the liver and kidney in the fridge until halfway through cooking. 3:16
2. Heat the olive oil over medium heat, add the veal and season it straight away with the salt, pepper, turmeric and paprika. Brown for about 2 minutes. 5:04
3. Add the tomatoes and let them release their juice, then the coriander and caraway for 2 minutes. Stir in the tomato paste and harissa and simmer 5 minutes, until the oil starts to separate. 6:25
4. Pour in about ¾ cup hot water, just to cover the meat. Cover and simmer 15 minutes. 8:21
5. When the veal is starting to soften, add the liver and kidney and stir. Let it come back to the boil, adding a little hot water if needed. 9:29
6. Stir in the crushed garlic halfway through and keep simmering, covered, adding splashes of hot water, until the veal is tender (about 30 minutes more). Leave on low heat until the oil rises to the top. 10:38
7. Add the sliced green pepper and the cumin for the last 5 minutes, then finish with freshly ground black pepper. 13:56
8. Serve scattered with the chopped parsley and spring onion. 16:19

> Tip Serves 4 is our estimate. Tunisians mop it up with crusty bread; a green salad keeps it lower in carbs. Lamb's heart can replace the kidney, and lean beef the veal. Keeps 2 days in the fridge.

The method is a summary in our words, in English — the video (in Arabic) shows every step.
