Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Peel the tomatoes: plunge them into boiling water for 30 seconds, then into cold water, slip off the skins and chop, keeping all the juice and seeds. 0:55
2. Cut the carrots into large pieces for the garnish, chop the onion and crush the garlic. 2:05
3. Heat the oil in a wide, very hot sauté pan and sear the veal in two batches until well caramelised. Turn the oven grill on. 3:38
4. Add the garlic and onion and soften without much colour. Sprinkle the flour evenly over the meat and put the pan under the hot grill for 5 minutes to toast it. 4:15
5. Put the pearl onions in a small pan with water just to cover, the sugar, a little butter and salt; simmer gently until the water has reduced completely and they are glazed. Quarter the mushrooms (don't soak them). 4:44
6. Deglaze the veal with the white wine, add the tomatoes, then the veal stock (or water) to just over the meat. Add the carrots and some salt, the thyme and bay, and simmer over low heat for 1½ hours. 5:51
7. Near the end, fry the mushrooms in butter in a very hot pan until well browned. 7:05
8. When the sauce has reduced to the level of the meat, check the onions are tender, stir in the mushrooms and onions and finish with chopped parsley. 7:50

> Tip Serves 6. Traditionally served with steamed potatoes; Etchebest adds carrots so the garnish cooks in the pot. Green beans or cauliflower keep it lower in carbs. Freezes well.
