Coconut flour, flax and psyllium give 13 g fibre for under 8 g net carbs a quarter, and olive oil is the main fat, so it is filling.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Put the kettle on. In a mixing bowl, combine the coconut flour, psyllium powder, ground flaxseed, baking powder, baking soda, instant yeast and salt and mix well. 2:48
2. Stir the vinegar into 470 ml of freshly boiled water. 4:04
3. Make a well in the dry mix, pour in the 4 tbsp olive oil, then add the hot vinegar water a little at a time, mixing and then kneading (about 10 minutes) until the dough is soft, moist and slightly bouncy — you may not need it all. 4:40
4. Shape the dough into a rough ball, return it to the bowl, cover with a damp tea towel and rest 1 hour. It won't rise, but it relaxes and bakes lighter. 6:24
5. Line a shallow oven-safe dish with baking paper, drizzle in plenty of olive oil, then press and spread the dough evenly into it, pinching any gaps closed. 7:07
6. Press dimples all over with your fingertips, drizzle generously with olive oil and spread it over, then scatter rosemary leaves and flaky salt and stick a few sprigs in. 8:02
7. Bake at 170 °C for 50–60 minutes until golden brown, then drizzle with a little more olive oil if you like. 9:16

> Tip Serves 4 as the cook suggests (a quarter is filling). Coconut flour soaks up a lot of liquid, so knead well and add water slowly. To make it bigger, spread it wider, not thicker, so the centre cooks through.
