Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Boil a kettle of water and turn the oven on to 100 °C; it stays on through the whole proof. 0:30
2. Whisk the almond flour, coconut flour, ground flaxseed, ground psyllium husk and baking powder in a large bowl until evenly mixed. Grind whole husks to half their volume before weighing. 0:39
3. In a small bowl stir the salt and yeast into the very warm water (50–56 °C) until the salt dissolves — the cook finds this warmth wakes the yeast without harming it. 1:18
4. Pour the vinegar, oil and yeast water into the dry mix, whisk, then knead by hand into a soft dough. 2:32
5. Shape into a loaf, smoothing the top with wet hands, and set it in a small parchment-lined loaf pan (about 18 × 9 cm), or shape a round boule. Dust with a little flour and cut 3 slashes on top. 3:35
6. Cover loosely with a dry tea towel, put a dish of boiling water on the bottom of the oven and the dough above it, and proof for 1 hour without opening the door. 5:02
7. Take out the towel and water dish, set the oven to 180 °C and bake about 1 hour, covering with foil if the top browns too fast, until it is crusty and 96–98 °C inside. 5:17
8. Lift the loaf from the pan onto a tray and leave it in the switched-off oven for 40–60 minutes so the crumb dries, then cool completely and cut into 20 slices. 6:00

> Tip The loaf cuts into 20 thin slices (the cook's serving is 1 slice). Grain-free, egg-free and dairy-free; it toasts well. Keep it in the fridge or freeze it sliced.
