Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Wash the moong dal until the water runs clear, then soak it for 1–1½ hours. Drain well. 1:43
2. Blend the dal with one piece of ginger, two green chillies, the cumin, a little salt and 60 ml water to a smooth, pourable batter that is not too thin. 1:56
3. For the topping, finely chop the carrot, cabbage, capsicum and the rest of the ginger and chillies (a chopper or grater is quickest). Mix in the grated paneer, coriander and spring onion greens. Don't salt it yet. 3:39
4. Heat a flat pan or tawa until a splash of water sizzles away, then wipe it and turn the heat to medium-low. Spread a ladle of batter into a round, not too thin, scatter over some of the topping and press it in. 5:41
5. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, drizzle a little ghee on top and cook until golden underneath. Flip and cook 2–3 minutes more so the vegetables and paneer brown a little. 6:22
6. Flip back, fold or roll the cheela and cut into pieces. Repeat with the rest of the batter. 7:00

> Tip Serves 5–6 (the cook's number). Time includes 1 hour soaking the dal. Swap in green moong dal for a pesarattu-style cheela, or use oil instead of ghee. Serve with green chutney.
